

Engaging and humorous, Someone I Know Has Diabetes tackles the physical and emotional realities families face when someone in the household is diagnosed with diabetes. This animated video addresses the underlying questions all ask when told they, or a loved one, has diabetes. What does this mean? Can we still do the things we enjoy? How can I help?

Another video Kids Talking about Diabetes with Friends models how young children with diabetes can talk confidently with their friends about how they can be of help. Using a superhero theme this short video can be viewed on its own or used in group discussions.

Both videos developed by Slam Dunk for Diabetes clinicians provide basic information equally captivating for kids and adults. Regardless of age, the foundation for optimal health is education that guides self-management. These videos provide critical information and skill-building produced at the CDC recommended 6th grade reading level.

Funding for Slam Dunk videos are provided by individual donors to Slam Dunk and educational grants from Omnipod®, Tandem®, and Xeris® Pharmaceuticals, Inc. For these videos or information on Slam Dunk camp opportunities, see slamdunkkids.org.

Slamdunkkids.org A 501c3 Diabetes Camp

Download – Kids talking Diabetes

Download - Someone I know